

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL COMMENT	Reforming British regulation	1
NEWS	The US: Bear Stearns feels the crunch • Regulatory changes on the horizon? • Credit curbs on the horizon • Regulator foresees a rising number of bank failures • SEC wants more disclosure- Helping the mortgage market • Sentinel charged with fraud... • ... and McCann settles SEC accounting complaint. The UK: After the Rock • FSA warns rumour mongers... • ... gets tough over insider dealing... • ... and sets up new unit to oversee bank risk models • US regulator criticises derivatives regulation • FSA may investigate Credit Suisse • A third of FSA staff plan to leave • Banking rules in the spotlight • Takeover Panel lowers the hurdle for independent advisers • City of London fraud squad targets mortgage scams • LSE chief calls for action on exchange clearing. Europe: Europe ponders SWF policy... • ... but Dubai warns of over-regulation • DB trader at centre of German probe • Green light for ABNAMro break-up plan • SocGen's accounting headache • UBS to improve its corporate governance • EU states co-operate to avoid cross-border crises • Concerns over hedge fund boom • Swiss Re's Raaflaub to head FINMA. Japan: Japanese banks urged to innovate Rest of the World: A call for regulatory action in credit crunch • Accounting standard-setters defend "fair value" • A move to a single global standard?	3
NEWS ANALYSIS:	France: Justin Keay wonders whether Société Générale's internal controls were too clever by half. The UK: Justin Keay says doubts are growing about the wisdom of a revamped FSA. Germany: Klaus Engelen suggests German officials are looking for scapegoats to blame for the toxic waste now contaminating the financial system.	14 15 17
REGULATION IN CRISIS: WHAT WENT WRONG	Rationalising Regulation With the global credit crunch posing continued challenges, David Green assesses how successfully regulators are adapting to a fast-changing financial world.	21

THE Financial Regulator

Volume 13 Number 1 – June 2008

	The light that failed Avinash Persaud says regulators and supervisors had long known that bank risk models would not work as intended.	26
	The Failed Supervisory Authority The UK regulator's unprecedented mea culpa is welcome but leaves a lot of important questions unanswered, says Simon Morris .	31
THE PAULSON PLAN DISSECTED	A blueprint for change Treasury secretary Hank Paulson's new blueprint for US regulatory reform is both welcome and long overdue, writes Mark Plotkin. Paulson's welcome strategy Jeroen Kremers and Dirk Schoenmaker say the shadow of the twin peaks model hangs over the US treasury secretary's new regulatory proposals.	36 46
RE-ORDERING REGULATION:	The appeal of Twin Peaks With the credit crunch provoking international soul-searching about the structure of regulation, Janko Gorter and Robert Moschsays say some countries are increasingly noting the success of the Dutch model. Time for prompt corrective action? The ongoing financial turmoil has generated renewed interest for prompt corrective action (PCA) in Europe. It could be a useful additional weapon, writes Thorvald Grung Moe.	53 61
BANK SUPERVISION	The humbling of Société Générale Just how did a lowly arbitrageur "bet the farm" and imperil a leading bank despite comprehensive controls and state-of-the-art risk management, asks Ed Wilding .	69
BOOKNOTES	Richard Pratt reviews Global Financial Regulation: The Essential Guide, by Howard Davies and David Green. Justin Keay reviews McMafia: Crime Without Frontiers by Misha Glenny.	83 87