
Contents

Opinion	Central bank (in)solvency	1
People	Central bankers in the news and on the move	3
Banknotes	A round-up of news and salient issues that have affected central bankers in the last three months.	6
Interview: Manfred J.M. Neumann	In conversation with Robert Pringle, Professor Neumann explains why he would retain the "first pillar" – the prominent role of money in the ECB's policymaking – but change the voting system in the ECB.	15
Next steps for the stability pact	New rules mean a tougher but more flexible pact has emerged from Brussels. But will earlier warnings from the commission restrain profligate governments? William Clarke reports from Brussels.	26
A spring-cleaning for the Eurosystem	Before welcoming newcomers, the Eurosystem has to put its house in order. How policy is made, who votes, and how many central bankers it needs are among the issues being tackled.	31
The Georgian era at the Bank of England	Punctuated by crises yet characterised by reform, Sir Edward George's stint in charge at the Bank of England has been nothing if not eventful. Elizabeth Hennessy looks back at the "Steady Eddie" years.	37
Special feature: central banks in transition
Interview: Grigori Marchenko	Three interviews by staff writer Benedict Mander present contrasting approaches to achieving price stability and economic growth. First, he spoke with the governor of Kazakhstan's central bank.	44
Interview: Irakli Managadze	Despite difficulties created by Georgia's small, low-income, export-dependent economy, the central bank has brought monetary stability within reach. The governor elaborates on the bank's approach.	50

Interview: Fatih Özatay	After the breakdown of the currency peg and years of high inflation, the central bank in Turkey has joined the ranks of inflation targetters. The vice-governor gauges the experience so far.	59
The Fund and the Bank: learning the right lessons?	Recent criticism has hurt – but where do the Fund and Bank go? The IMF needs to be less G7-dominated and make fewer loans, says Frank Cassell, a former UK executive director at the Bretton Woods twins.	64
Why finance gives the West a bad name	Accounts of the state of global finance at the start of the twenty-first century make for disconcerting reading, as Robert Pringle discovers. Observers from quite different disciplines raise the same question: can capitalism be trusted?	68
How Fukui should deal with deflation	In the first of two articles to mark the occasion of the appointment of Toshihiko Fukui as the new governor at the Bank of Japan, Central Banking presents Andrew Smithers's diagnosis and remedy for Japan's deflation-racked economy.	74
No honeymoon for Fukui	From Tokyo, Tomohiko Taniguchi assesses Fukui's options. The long-standing favourite for the job now has his chance, but he needs to learn how to talk to markets – fast.	79
Building inflation credibility	Inflation targetting requires believable statistics and an educated public. Jannie Rossouw offers his prescription for a barometer to assess the public's perception of an inflation target's credibility.	82
Hitting the target	Europe is debating the next stage in its payment system: Target. Central banks should look beyond RTGS to benefit the consumer, argues Mike Evans.	86
Central bank website award	David Dodge, the governor of the Bank of Canada, accepted the 2003 award for the best central bank website on behalf of the bank, and vowed to be back to collect the award next year as well.	93