

---

Contents

---

Opinion	Rules and how to mend them	1
People	Central bankers in the news and on the move	3
Banknotes	A round-up of news and salient issues that have affected central bankers in the last three months.	6
Interview: Otmar Issing	In an exclusive interview with the editor, the ECB's chief economist explains the thinking behind the ECB's monetary policy and expresses his concerns for the future of the stability and growth pact and the fluctuating exchange rate.	13
New light on the Fed's history	In 1932, the Fed's reluctance to intervene to expand the money supply was incorrect but understandable argues Tim Congdon. What can policymakers in Japan learn from the Fed's mistakes?	24
Why has Brown ditched Prudence?	What has happened to Gordon Brown's fiscal prudence? Howard Flight, the shadow chief secretary to the treasury, investigates the causes and consequences of the huge increases in UK public spending and borrowing.	32
Iraq's botched currency reform	A credible monetary regime is vital for economic growth and political stability in Iraq. Have the authorities got it right with the dinar's managed float? Steve Hanke and Matt Sekerke highlight the inadequacies and analyse the risks of the current set-up.	39
The SDR: an international reserve liability	Transparency in national reserves must extend to both sides of the balance sheet. For example, the SDR is a liability as well as an asset. Richard Erb peers into IMF financial statements to gain a clearer picture.	46

EU enlargement special feature - Part I

In this and the following issue (to be published in May), Central Banking presents a comprehensive survey of the implications of enlargement for policymakers in the accession countries, ECB and European Commission.

The accession countries: what is equal treatment?	In the first article of our survey, Peter Kenen and Ellen Meade examine the tests accession countries must meet to join the euro. As the world has changed since the Maastricht treaty, the criteria to join the single currency should too, they argue.	54
Challenges for central banks	As accession countries prepare for the stresses and strains of joining the EU and the euro, Max Watson, a former deputy director of the IMF, looks at the financial stability risks they face.	63
Making markets work	Building a market economy requires an approach coordinated across government functions. Central bankers are ideally placed to contribute to this reform process, says John Chown.	71
Interview: Zdenek Tuma	In conversation with the editor, the governor of the Czech National Bank assesses the country's transition to a market economy and explains the central bank's cautious approach to joining the euro.	76
Interview: Michael Bonello	The governor of the Central Bank of Malta describes the challenges facing the central bank in the accession process and the programme to reposition Malta as a financial centre within the EU.	83
Launching the Asian bond	Anthony Rowley reports on the role central banks are playing in kick-starting intra-regional bonds in Asia.	94
A bankers' guild	The creation of a guild for international bankers in London heralds an opportunity for an informal approach to raising standards in financial life.	98
Previous issues	Contents of the four previous issues of Central Banking at a glance	100