

Letter from the Editor	1
Diary	9
Important events for SPEED readers over the next quarter
Profile	10
Voca, Britain's payments processor, has its eyes on European markets, says Marion King
Personal view: Remittances	12
Central banks can take a lead in improving markets, says Michael Lewis
Analysis	14
Why has NYMEX reluctantly moved to e-trading? Euroclear's single platform faces a new threat
Oversight	15
Central bankers all agree it is important, but what does oversight mean in practice? Tomáš Hládek of the Czech National Bank explains
Fed online	17
Ensuring flexibility and security are what counts, says Bill Barouski, of the Chicago Fed, as the Federal Reserve Banks prepare to launch their latest internet-based payment product
Cover story: A new era for European settlement	19
SPEED 's cover story considers key elements of the programmes to reform Europe's post-trade infrastructure and what they could mean for the private sector. Specialist writers explain the significance of the initiative from the European Central Bank, provide the full background to the commission's decision, and assess progress made, mainly by the private sector, in removing barriers in the market.
An unsettling proposal from the European Central Bank	20
McCreevy's roadmap: The limits to interoperability	23
Interview: Alberto Giovannini	27
The Giovannini barriers: a SPEED report	31

SPEED agenda	36
A round-up of news and key talking points in Settlement and clearing, Payments, E-money, E-trading and Development policies over the last three months
Technology	48
Dave Birch casts an expert eye over emerging trends in retail electronic payments
Forum: Payment systems in 2010	51
Five leading industry figures debate the future of large-value payment systems (see below)
Europe's bourses	56
The fallout from what has become a global battle for Europe's stock exchanges will have far-reaching implications for clearing and settling, writes Stewart Fleming
People	63
SPEED figures in the news and on the move

SPEED* FORUM participants

The leading industry figures taking part in the SPEED Forum on the future of large-value systems come from the major sectors involved.

Eric Sepkes from Citigroup has been involved in payment infrastructures for more than 20 years. He has been chairman of CHAPS and is a member of both APACS and the European Payments Council.

Daniel Heller and Harry Leinonen are both central bankers – from the Swiss National Bank and the Bank of Finland respectively. While differing in their backgrounds, both have many years experience in payment systems oversight and policy issues and both represent their respective organisations in leading official international payment committees.

Dave Bradbury's particular expertise is in real time gross settlement systems. He has advised 17 central banks and clearing organisations and has over 30 years' experience with global payments projects.

Tom Buschman's experience is as a corporate treasurer, and he worked with the Shell Group for over 15 years. He is founder, chairman and CEO of Twist Process Innovations Ltd.